

TOM THUMB

Once upon a time there lived a poor man and a woman, who had no children and their only wish was to have a child.

One evening as they were sitting on the porch, they saw a falling star and the woman said, "Let's wish for a baby, no matter how small it would be!"

Seven months had passed and their wish came true - a child no longer than a thumb was born. Because he was so little, they called him Tom Thumb and loved him with all their hearts. The boy became wise and nimble, but he never grew in size, so his parents were very careful that nothing would happen to him.

One day the boy said to his father, "I'm old enough to help with chores like all the other children do. Please, father, let me lead the horse to where you are working. I may not be big enough to lead it by the reins, but I can sit in the horse's ear and give it directions." His father agreed, because he knew that his son is a clever boy and he would manage to do the job. Tom Thumb sat in the horse's ear and kindly directed the horse, but as they were going through the woods, they met two strangers. The men wondered where the directions came from and went around the horse several times before they finally noticed the little boy, sitting comfortably in the horse's ear. "Good lord," the strangers exclaimed for they had never seen such a little boy before. "Where are your parents," they asked the boy and Tom Thumb pointed at his father who was walking behind.

"Good day! We have great news for you, mister! We will give you as much money as you wish if you agree to sell us your boy! He will travel with us on exhibitions and we will make a fortune out of him for never has anyone seen such a small boy!"

"My boy is not some jester and he is not for sale," replied the man angrily. But Tom Thumb jumped on his father's shoulder and whispered in his ear, "Listen, father, you're getting older and you won't be always able to work as hard as you do now. But if you let me go with these two men and take the money which they offer you, you and mother will finally live a good life. I promise that I will return soon."

The man would always listen to what his boy had to say as he was a wise boy and decided to let him go. Tom Thumb sat on the rim of one of the men's hat and they left.

When the men stopped for a while to have lunch Tom Thumb slipped out of the hat and slipped into a mouse-hole. The men tried to get him out of the hole by poking inside with their sticks but all their efforts were useless, because Tom Thumb had gone deep into the hole and they could only hear his voice, "Go on your way without me, gentlemen." As it was getting dark, the men had no choice but to continue without the boy. When he made sure that the men are gone, he crept out of the hole and started looking for a place to spend the night. As he was walking, Tom Thumb bumped into an empty snail shell and quickly went inside. He got ready to sleep, when suddenly he heard voices, "How are we going to rob the pastor's house exactly?" Tom Thumb immediately understood that he had to deal with robbers and decided to save the pastor's house.

"Good evening, gentlemen!" Tom Thumb greeted but the men couldn't see him. "Here! Follow my voice and you will find me," he guided the robbers. "I can help you with the robbery, because I am so little and I can go wherever I want."

At first, the men didn't believe their eyes, but the boy paid no attention to their state of shock. "I will go into the house and I will hand out things, if you would only take me with you," he finally convinced them and they went to the pastor's house.

The minute he found himself inside the house Tom Thumb started making whole lot of noises. "Keep it quiet," the robbers hushed at him, but he pretended not to understand them. "What do you want? Do you want everything?" he yelled, thus making the robbery so obvious that he woke up one of the maids. She scared off the robbers, but didn't see Tom Thumb so he finally got a good night sleep in the hay.

In the morning Tom Thumb was awoken by a cow, which was calmly eating the hay that he was sleeping in. Before he could run away, the boy found himself in the cow's stomach. "Help! Help meeee, I am stuck inside the cow!" Tom Thumb started yelling, hoping that someone will hear him. It happened that the pastor was passing by and when he heard the voice coming out of the cow's stomach, he thought that some evil spirit had enslaved the animal and he killed the poor cow that same day. The cow's stomach was thrown into a pile of trash with Tom Thumb inside it, so he had to find his way out of the smelling pile. He was almost out when a hungry wolf came towards and gulped the whole stomach.

"Oh, heavens!" cried Tom Thumb, but he didn't lose hope. On the contrary, he decided to make the wolf bring him home.

"I know a house not far from here, which is full of bacon and ham and all delicacies," he spoke from inside the wolf's belly. The wolf, interested in the idea, followed Tom Thumb's directions and soon they arrived. The boy guided the wolf to the kitchen, where the beast started tearing a piece of ham. Tom Thumb's father heard the noise coming from the kitchen and took his axe. He told his wife, "I will chop him into small pieces with it!" But right before he did that, the man heard voice from inside the wolf.

"Father, I'm in the wolf's stomach, so be careful not to kill me!" His father killed the wolf and then cut him open to get Tom Thumb out of it. "My dearest boy, I promise never to sell you again, not for all the riches in the world." They gave him food, drink and new clothes and lived happily ever after together.

TOM THUMB

COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS

1. Why did the man and the woman call their son Tom Thumb?
2. Could Tom Thumb grow bigger as time passed?
3. What did the two strangers want from Tom Thumb's father?
4. Who did Tom Thumb overhear as he was about to sleep?
5. Did Tom Thumb really want to help the robbers?
6. Why did the pastor kill his cow?
7. How could Tom Thumb make the wolf take him home?

WRITE TRUE OR FALSE

1. _____ The man and the woman always wished for a wealthy life.
2. _____ Tom Thumb was a clever boy so his father would always listen to him.
3. _____ The two strangers could get Tom Thumb out of the hole with their sticks.
4. _____ The pastor never learned that Tom Thumb saved his house.
5. _____ The wolf woke up Tom Thumb while he was sleeping in the hay.
6. _____ Tom Thumb's father was glad that he had sold his son to the strangers.

CIRCLE THE CORRECT CHOICE

1. Tom Thumb sat in the horse's and kindly directed the horse.
ear / hair / nose
2. The little boy slipped out of the hat and slipped into a rabbit-hole / snake-hole / mouse-hole
3. As he was walking, Tom Thumb bumped into a and quickly went inside.
snail shell / sea shell / turtle shell
4. The two robbers were planning to rob the house.
mayor's / pastor's / doctor's
5. Tom Thumb made so much noise that he woke up one of the dogs / cows / maids
6. Tom Thumb's father killed the wolf with his and saved his son.
axe / knife / rifle

ANSWER KEY

Comprehension Questions

1. Because he was so little.
2. No, he couldn't.
3. The two strangers wanted Tom Thumb's father to sell them his son.
4. He overheard two robbers as he was about to sleep.
5. No, he didn't.
6. Because he thought that some evil spirit had enslaved the animal.
7. He told the wolf that he knew a house which is full of bacon and ham and all delicacies.

Write True or False

1. False
2. True
3. False
4. True
5. False
6. False

Circle the Correct Choice

1. ear
2. mouse-hole
3. snail shell
4. pastor's
5. maids
6. axe

TOM THUMB

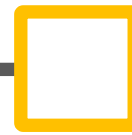

Read the texts in the boxes and number them from 1 to 8 to sequence the fairy tale

He started walking to find a place to spend the night and went into an empty snail shell that he had bumped into. When he was ready to sleep, he overheard two robbers planning to rob the pastor's house. He decided to save the pastor's house. He greeted the robbers and told them that he could help them with the robbery. Since he was so little he could go into the house and hand out things for them.

Once upon a time there lived a poor man and his wife, who had no children and their only wish was to have one. One evening they saw a falling star and wished for a baby, no matter how small it would be. After seven months their wish came true. The woman gave birth to a child no longer than a thumb. Because he was so little, they called him Tom Thumb and loved him with all their hearts.

The pastor heard the voice and thought that the cow was enslaved by an evil spirit. He killed the cow the same day and threw its stomach with a pile of trash with Tom Thumb inside it. He had to find his way out. He was almost out when a hungry wolf came and gulped the whole stomach. This time he was in the wolf's belly, but he didn't lose his hope. He decided to make the wolf bring him home.

The boy became wise and nimble, but he never grew in size, so his parents always wanted to protect him. One day, the boy told his father that he wanted to help with the chores like all the other children do and that he wanted to lead the horse to where he was working. His father agreed and Tom Thumb sat in the horse's ear and began giving directions. As they were going through the woods, they met two strangers.

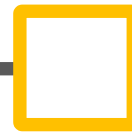

The two robbers agreed and Tom Thumb went inside. He made so much noise in the house that he woke up one of the maids. She scared off the robbers, but she didn't see the boy. Tom Thumb finally got a good night's sleep in the hay. In the morning, he was awakened by a cow, which suddenly gulped him while eating the hay before he could run away. He was in the cow's stomach and shouted for help.

The two men were surprised to see such a little boy and made the father an offer. They were going to give him as much money as he wanted in return for the little boy. They were going to take him to exhibitions and earn money. The father refused it angrily. But Tom Thumb told his father to take the money so that he could live a good life with his wife. He also promised that he would return home soon.

He shouted from the wolf's belly. "I know a house full of bacon and ham and all delicacies." The wolf, interested in the idea, followed Tom Thumb's directions and soon they arrived. The boy guided the wolf to the kitchen, where the beast started tearing a piece of ham. Tom Thumb's father heard the noise, took his axe, killed the wolf and rescued his son. Tom Thumb and his parents lived happily ever after.

The father would always listen to his son, so let him to go with these two men. Tom Thumb and two men set off. When they stopped for lunch, Tom Thumb ran away and slipped into a mouse-hole. No matter how hard they tried, the two men could not get him out of it. So the two men had to leave without him. When Tom Thumb made sure that the men were gone, he crept out of the hole.

TOM THUMB

Read the texts in the boxes and number them from 1 to 8 to sequence the fairy tale

5

He started walking to find a place to spend the night and went into an empty snail shell that he had bumped into. When he was ready to sleep, he overheard two robbers planning to rob the pastor's house. He decided to save the pastor's house. He greeted the robbers and told them that he could help them with the robbery. Since he was so little he could go into the house and hand out things for them.

1

Once upon a time there lived a poor man and his wife, who had no children and their only wish was to have one. One evening they saw a falling star and wished for a baby, no matter how small it would be. After seven months their wish came true. The woman gave birth to a child no longer than a thumb. Because he was so little, they called him Tom Thumb and loved him with all their hearts.

7

The pastor heard the voice and thought that the cow was enslaved by an evil spirit. He killed the cow the same day and threw its stomach with a pile of trash with Tom Thumb inside it. He had to find his way out. He was almost out when a hungry wolf came and gulped the whole stomach. This time he was in the wolf's belly, but he didn't lose his hope. He decided to make the wolf bring him home.

2

The boy became wise and nimble, but he never grew in size, so his parents always wanted to protect him. One day, the boy told his father that he wanted to help with the chores like all the other children do and that he wanted to lead the horse to where he was working. His father agreed and Tom Thumb sat in the horse's ear and began giving directions. As they were going through the woods, they met two strangers.

6

The two robbers agreed and Tom Thumb went inside. He made so much noise in the house that he woke up one of the maids. She scared off the robbers, but she didn't see the boy. Tom Thumb finally got a good night's sleep in the hay. In the morning, he was awoken by a cow, which suddenly gulped him while eating the hay before he could run away. He was in the cow's stomach and shouted for help.

3

The two men were surprised to see such a little boy and made the father an offer. They were going to give him as much money as he wanted in return for the little boy. They were going to take him to exhibitions and earn money. The father refused it angrily. But Tom Thumb told his father to take the money so that he could live a good life with his wife. He also promised that he would return home soon.

8

He shouted from the wolf's belly. "I know a house full of bacon and ham and all delicacies." The wolf, interested in the idea, followed Tom Thumb's directions and soon they arrived. The boy guided the wolf to the kitchen, where the beast started tearing a piece of ham. Tom Thumb's father heard the noise, took his axe, killed the wolf and rescued his son. Tom Thumb and his parents lived happily ever after.

4

The father would always listen to his son, so let him to go with these two men. Tom Thumb and two men set off. When they stopped for lunch, Tom Thumb ran away and slipped into a mouse-hole. No matter how hard they tried, the two men could not get him out of it. So the two men had to leave without him. When Tom Thumb made sure that the men were gone, he crept out of the hole.

ANSWER KEY

